MLIR (Multi-Level Intermediate Representation) is an open-source compiler infrastructure project developed as a sub-project of the LLVM project. It provides a modular and extensible intermediate representation (IR) framework intended to facilitate the construction of domain-specific compilers and improve compilation for heterogeneous computing platforms. MLIR supports multiple abstraction levels in a single IR and introduces dialects, a mechanism for defining custom operations, types, and attributes tailored to specific domains. The name "Multi-Level Intermediate Representation" reflects the system's ability to model computations at various abstraction levels and progressively lower them toward machine code.

MLIR was originally developed in 2018 by Chris Lattner at Google, and publicly released...
